

POND
COMICS

#1
FIRST SPLASH!

DUCKIE AND CHICK

by Harrison

WHO'S BEST?
DUCKIE OR CHICK?

NEW SERIES!
LOTS OF LAUGHS!
BIG COMPETITIONS!
EPIC QUACK-UPS!

A LILY PAD.
A CANOE.
A RIVALRY.

LET THE GAMES BEGIN!

ONE POND. TWO BIRDS. ENDLESS CHAOS.

Duckie and Chick by Harrison, Mom, and Al.

Brittany Clark

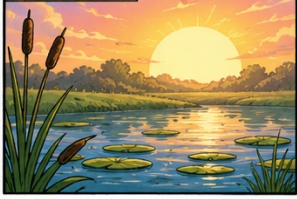

All rights reserved.

This portfolio was created in partial fulfillment of the requirements for EDUC 3604 —
Evaluation of Student Learning at the University of Lethbridge, Winter 2026.

This material is intended for educational purposes only. Unauthorized reproduction or distribution is prohibited.

The sun slowly rose over the pond.

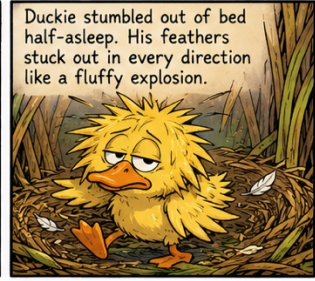

Inside a cozy little nest made of reeds and moss, Duckie was still fast asleep with his beak hanging open.

A loud frog croak startled him awake.

Duckie stumbled out of bed half-asleep. His feathers stuck out in every direction like a fluffy explosion.

Still barely awake, he shuffled to the bathroom puddle and brushed his beak.

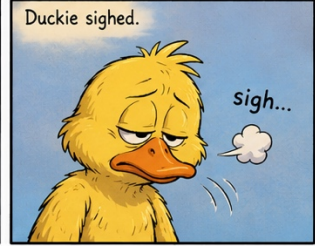

Then he combed his feathers with a tiny fishbone comb.

One feather popped right back up.

Duckie sighed.

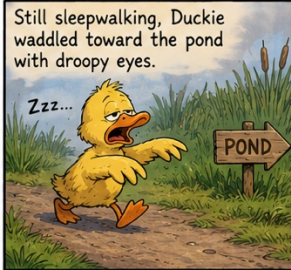

Next came breakfast: soggy pond cereal.

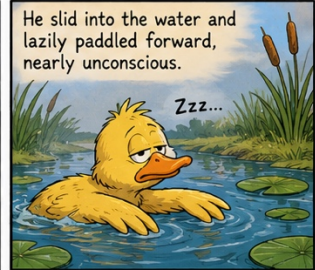

He took one bite.

Still sleepwalking, Duckie waddled toward the pond with droopy eyes.

He slid into the water and lazily paddled forward, nearly unconscious.

He slowly, and sleazily paddles across the pond, not really aware of what's happening...

Heeyyy, Beaver...

Mornin', Duckie.

Hellllloo, Goose...

Good morning.

Hiyaaa, Turtle...

Morning, Duckie.

Hellooooo, Froggy...

Ribbit! Mornin'!

Now for a relaxing morning, on my very own lily pad...

The pond sparkled peacefully. Dragonflies buzzed overhead.

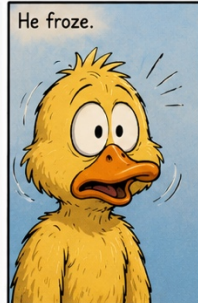

Duckie smiled sleepily as he approached his favourite giant lily pad.

But then—

He froze.

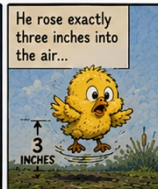

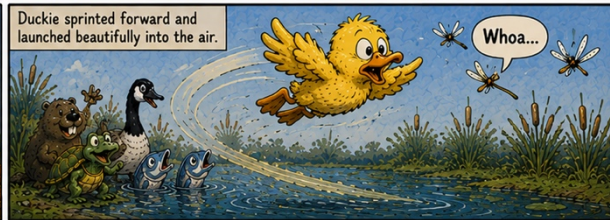

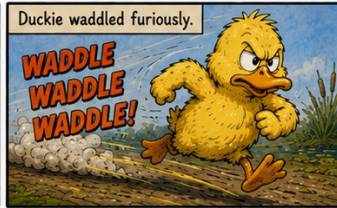

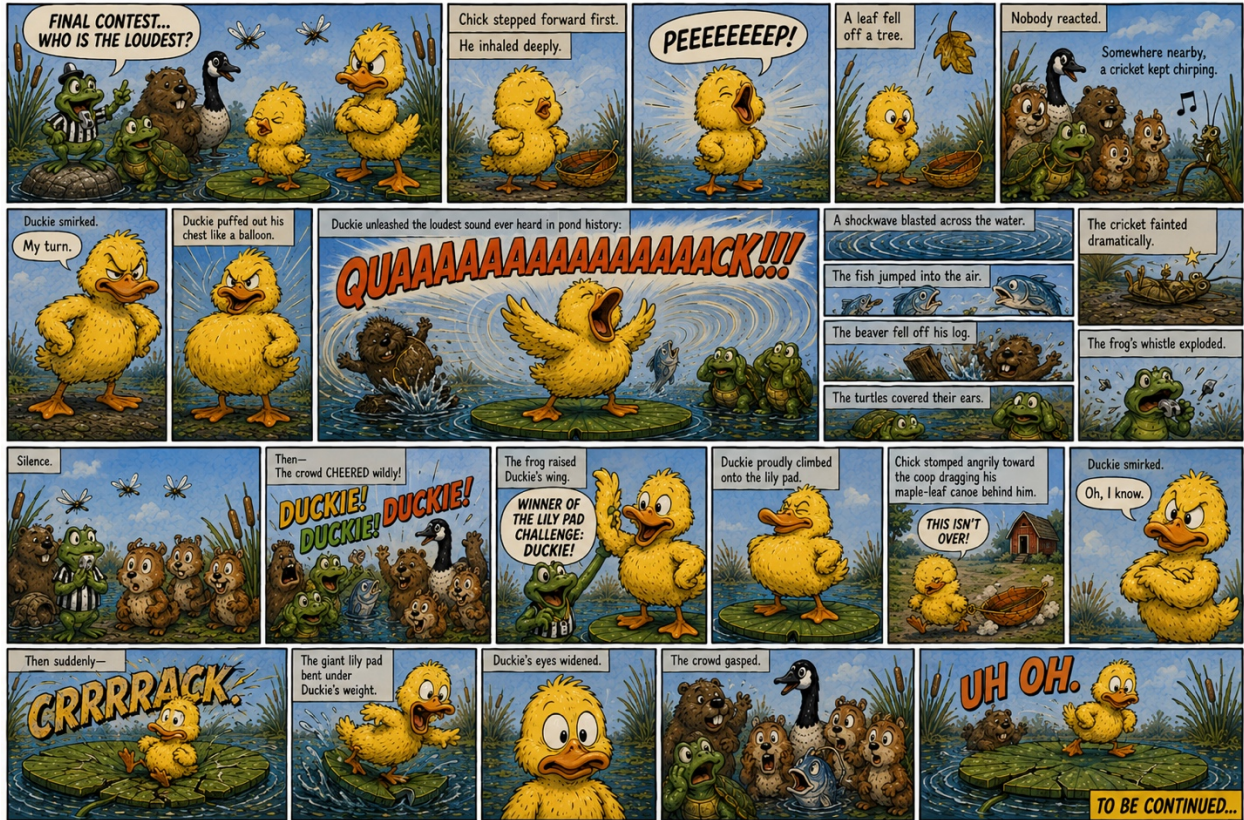

Sitting RIGHT in the middle of his lily pad was a tiny yellow chick wearing sunglasses under a paper umbrella.

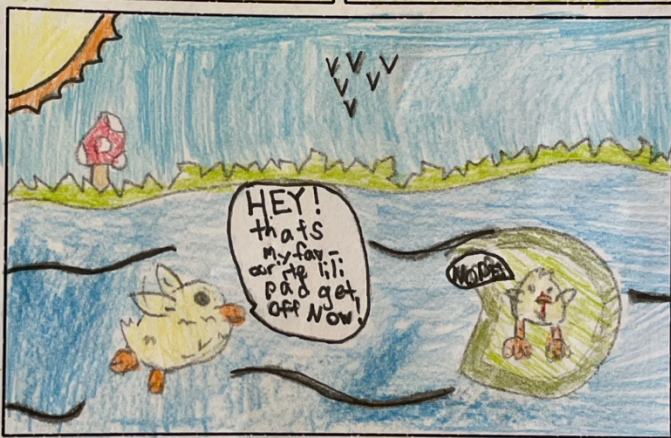

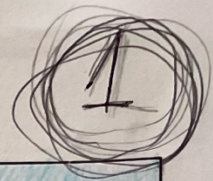

A crowd quickly gathered around the pond: Beaver, Turtle, Goose, Fish, Dragonflies, and even three confused squirrels.

3

