The Rabbits

Three rabbits lived in a backyard in Lethbridge, Alberta.

Their names were Flopsy, Mopsy, and Big Bertha.

They lived behind a kind woman named Juniper Snow, also called Junie. She had five busy children.

The backyard was a safe place. There was grass to eat, space to play, and a fence to keep them safe.

The rabbits were happy there.

Flopsy

Flopsy was the oldest.

She had brown fur and a small nose that moved as she searched for food.

Flopsy loved to eat. She liked grass and hay, but she also liked treats from the garden.

She sometimes ate carrots and flowers, even when she was not supposed to.

Flopsy knew the rules...

But she did not always follow them.

Mopsy

She loved to explore.

Mopsy liked to dig, run, and try new things.

She also loved children and liked to play with them.

But Mopsy was often restless.

She always wanted more adventure.

Big Bertha

Big Bertha was the largest rabbit.

She had soft, light fur and long ears.

Big Bertha loved her home.

She had food, shelter, and a safe place to live.

She did not want to leave.

She thought everything she needed was already there.

The Idea

One night, Mopsy could not sleep.

She felt bored and wanted something new.

Earlier, she found a soft spot in the dirt near the fence.

She decided to dig.

The Tunnel

Mopsy dug slowly at first.

Then faster and faster.

Soon, dirt was flying everywhere.

She made a tunnel under the fence.

At last, she reached the other side.

The Adventure Begins

Mopsy looked around.

The world felt big and exciting.

The moon shone above her.

Behind her was home.

Ahead of her was adventure.

Mopsy took a step forward.

A new adventure had begun.
